This is the first volume in a series and focuses on the practice of teaching for nursing educators, emphasizing current innovations and trends in nursing education in all healthcare environments.

About the Author

The Review describes educational strategies you can adapt to your own settings and is written for educators in associate, baccalaureate, and graduate nursing programs, staff development, and continuing education. The goal of the Review is to keep educators updated on recent innovations in nursing education across all settings.