This twentieth volume of this landmark series focuses on geriatric nursing research.

Clinicians, educators, students, and researchers will find an up-to-date synthesis of nursing research relating to over a dozen important topics, including pain, pressure ulcers, dementia, home health and hearing impairment. Future-oriented topics include the implication of genetics and telehealth for geriatric care.

Topics include: managing common conditions in elders; settings for elder care; public health, social, and scientific trends; and neglected areas of research in gerontological nursing.
