An international publication designed for the practicing equine veterinarian, equine researcher, and other equine health care specialist.

Published monthly, each issue of JEVS includes original scientific research, case reports, and review articles from leaders in the equine veterinary field. The journal also includes regular features such as meeting and conference reports, news, and literature reviews to help equine practitioners stay current with the issues affecting their practice. Breeders, trainers, and others involved in horse production and management will also find the Journal of Equine Veterinary Science an invaluable resource.
